Historic LAFAYETTE SQUARE

An Urban Oasis

Live ♣ Work ♣ Play

History & Architecture

Lafayette Square is St. Louis' oldest historic district and was declared a National Historic District in 1979. The neighborhood surrounds a 30-acre Victorian Park, which is the oldest park west of the Mississippi River. The park exists as the centerpiece for 375 Victorian homes of French Second Empire, Romanesque, Italianate, Queen Anne and Federal designs. Architecture Magazine and Better Homes & Gardens have named Lafayette Square “One of the ten most beautiful painted ladies neighborhoods in the nation.”

Lafayette Square Restoration Committee

A group of young city pioneers formed an organization in the 1960s called The Lafayette Square Restoration Committee (LSRC) to prevent a highway from being constructed through the middle of Lafayette Park. The LSRC then restored many of the neighborhood's Victorian homes from boarding houses back into single-family residences. Outsiders saw the progress, joined in, and today, almost every historic home in Lafayette Square has been restored.

The Park House

The Old Lafayette Park Police Station, built in 1866, accommodated a small police force to oversee the large crowds seeking recreation in the Park. Today, the building is known as the Park House and can be rented for small events of up to 50 people or for bridal parties to prepare for weddings in Lafayette Park.
